OFFICE OF GENERAL
COUNSEL

Office of the General Counsel

MUR # 7231

Greetings,

The purpose of this letter is to serve as the instrument through which a complaint is filed by Mr. Kerry D. Bowers (complainant) alleging that CNN[®] (respondent) through an article (Exhibit A) authored by Ashley Killough and Jeremy Diamond (co-respondents) did, on 23 March 2015, violate 11 CFR 1 § 100.73 (b). That clause reads, "That is a part of a general pattern of campaign-related news accounts that give reasonably equal coverage to all opposing candidates in the circulation or listening area, is not a contribution."

It is alleged by the complainant that the respondents made a contribution to the campaign of Republican presidential-candidate Senator Ted Cruz when the respondents stated factually incorrect information in the first line of the subject article, information for which there was both government and private sources readily available to the respondents that provided factual information contrary to their report. The sentence alleged as a contribution read, "Sen. Ted Cruz, the conservative firebrand from Texas, became the first Republican to announce his campaign for the presidency, and he spent Monday morning telling a crowd at the largest Christian university in the world to imagine what the country will be like when he takes office, and pitching his personal history as a key part of his campaign."

For perspective, the complainant in this matter announced his campaign as a Republican candidate for the 2016 presidential race in a publicly-released YouTube[®] video on 13 Sept 2013 (Exhibit B), 17 months before Senator Cruz's 23 March 2015 candidacy announcement. On 23 February 2014 and 5 March 2014, the Las Vegas Sun[®] newspaper printed a general news story about the complainant's candidacy for president in the 2016 race (Exhibits C and D). On 28 April 2014, and after having completed the Combined Federal Regulations (CFR) requisites for registration as a federal candidate, the complainant was registered by the Federal Election Commission (FEC) as a Republican presidential candidate becoming, chronologically, the 29th Republican to do so and 11 months ahead of Senator Cruz's announcement (Exhibit E). The complainant was also the only Republican presidential candidate to exhibit a presidential campaign at the 2014 Republican Leadership Conference held in New Orleans, LA, from 29 May to 31 May 2014, over 9 months ahead of Senator Cruz's announcement (Exhibit F). The complainant further alleges that consequential to a campaign begun well ahead of Senator Cruz's and inclusive of radio, web streaming, public appearances and news-media announcements about the same ranging from Washington State to Florida, an inquiry using an internet search engine on the date of Senator Cruz's announcement would have revealed information contrary to that reported by the respondents.

Senator Cruz was, in fact, the 56th Republican candidate (Exhibit E) to confirm his candidacy as evidenced with his registration with the FEC for the 2016 presidential campaign, a registration following the confirmation of 55 other Republican candidates of unchallenged and equal legal standing for the office at that point in the campaign season. Given the FEC-registration date for Senator Cruz, and the fact that no States at that point were registering candidates for their respective primary or caucus, then the statement "Sen. Ted Cruz, the conservative firebrand from Texas, became the first Republican to announce his campaign for the presidency..." is a fabricated statement as supported by a preponderance of evidence to the contrary.

Specifically, the complainant alleges the respondents were in violation of the three distinctive parts of the subject CFR clause as follows. First, the statements are a "contribution" in consequence to their being fabricated and in such manner as to favorably elevate the status of a single candidate through a false statement "Sen. Ted Cruz,... became the first Republican to announce his campaign for the presidency..." Second, the fabrication was not necessary to describing the candidate's entry into the campaign, thus exceeding the CFR provision for "a general pattern of campaign-related news." And third, all opposing Republican candidates; 55 registered with the FEC on the date that Senator Cruz made his announcement; were denied "equal coverage in the circulation or listening area." Such coverage, in the opinion of the complainant, did not require each candidate to be named, only an acknowledgement that there were 55 other Republican candidates.

It is further alleged by the complainant that the respondents caused political and financial injury to the complainant and other Republican presidential candidates registered with the FEC prior to the date Senator Cruz announced his candidacy. Political injury occurred when a reputable news source, the respondent, in effect reported there are no other Republican candidates and with the reasonable expectation the respondents' readers would believe that to be true. Additional injury alleged by the complainant occurred when readers, previously aware of one or more other Republican presidential candidates, may have come to believe that (1) the other candidates are no longer in the race, or (2) they have previously undisclosed matters that exempted them from consideration as a candidate by the respondents.

It is the opinion of the complainant, too, that fabricated and injurious statements made by a widely-circulated and reputable news source, such as that of the respondent, requires some immeasurable reintroduction of the injured candidate, or candidates, to a public misled in consequence to the fabricated story. This, being so, then the complainant alleges it is reasonable to believe that such fabricated contributions impact the injured candidates future receipt of campaign contributions, future invitations to public campaign events, and exclusion from future polling. All these political setbacks, in the opinion of the complainant, translate to additional expenditures to recapture ground lost to a fabricated story. How much ground is lost and how much money is actually expended to recapture a candidate's status held prior to the alleged violation is impossible to quantify. But, in the opinion of the complainant, it is a reasonable expectation that there has to be injury and that injury is both political and financial.

It is also alleged by the complainant that injury imparted by fabricated reporting extends beyond the unreported candidates and to the whole of the American people. Why? Because, in the opinion of the complainant, the people are directed away from a candidate (or candidates) that may potentially serve to the people's best interest, while being steered by the respondents to a candidate that may not serve as well to their interests. If such were the case, and it actually may be the consequence today, then the people, in the opinion of the complainant, will incur both political and financial injury in consequence to the respondents' fabricated and misleading reporting.

In conclusion, it is alleged by the complainant that the respondents did, through their own efforts of construction, fabricate a report containing false and misleading information that contributed to the benefit of a single candidate. The complainant further alleges that information was publicly available to the respondents that a reasonable search would have revealed as evidence to the contrary of that reported by the respondents. And last, the alleged contribution, though impossible to quantify, but with reasonable expectation, did injure the complainant, other unreported Republican presidential candidates and, potentially, the whole of the American people, both politically and financially.

Ted Cruz 'imagines' 2016 presidency in Liberty speech

By Ashley Killough and Jeremy Diamond, CNN

⌚ Updated 1:28 PM ET, Mon March 23, 2015

Story highlights

Cruz announces candidacy in a video on Twitter

He follows up with a speech at Liberty University in Virginia

Lynchburg, Virginia (CNN) — Sen. Ted Cruz, the conservative firebrand from Texas, became the first Republican to announce his campaign for the presidency, and he spent Monday morning telling a crowd at the largest Christian university in the world to imagine what the country will be like when he takes office, and pitching his personal history as a key part of his campaign.

"These are all of our stories," Cruz told the audience Monday, roaming around the circular stage at Liberty University, in Lynchburg, Virginia, opening his remarks by spotlighting his family history and his own path to Washington. "These are who we are as Americans. And yet for so many Americans, the promise of America seems more and more distant."

Cruz drew on the past only to focus on the future, repeatedly and emphatically asking the Liberty University student audience to "imagine" the U.S. under conservative leadership -- laying out his vision for the country and a Cruz presidency.

The senator from Texas, who burst into the national limelight with his staunch opposition to Obamacare and his willingness to shut down the federal government, presents a direct challenge to the expected bids of establishment Republicans such as Florida Gov. Jeb Bush -- candidates Cruz coyly refers to as the "mushy middle."

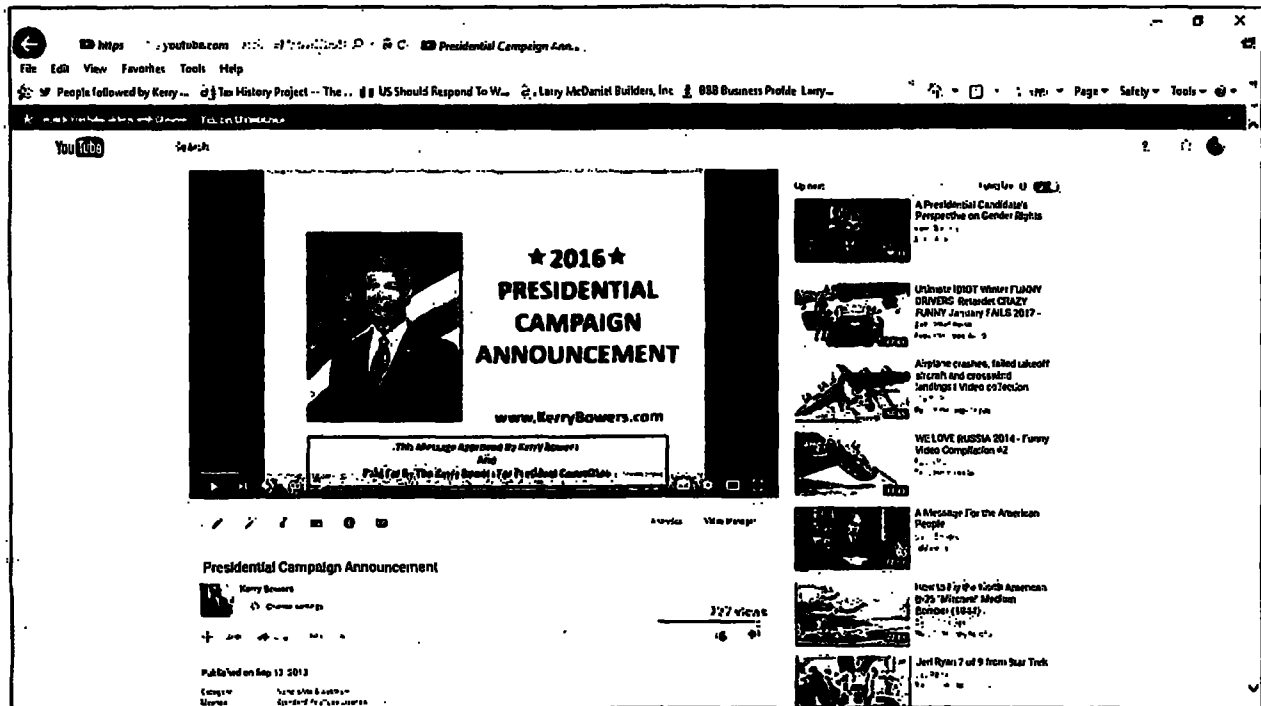

Monday's event was the last part of a carefully coordinated media rollout, following Cruz's announcement of his candidacy in a 30-second video message posted on Twitter shortly after midnight on Monday, roughly 24 hours after the Houston Chronicle first reported his planned announcement.

Ten thousand students from Liberty University crowded into the university's main arena for Cruz's announcement. The venue choice at this socially conservative campus aims to give Cruz an early boost among evangelical voters, who will be key to boosting presidential hopefuls in states like Iowa and South Carolina that have early nominating contests. It was a youthful crowd, as students are required to attend the University's tri-weekly convocation address.

Running for president, really?

Henderson veteran 'picking up the flag'

BY TOM GORMAN
STAFF WRITER

➔ This is how easy it is to launch a campaign for public office: Kerry Bowers, a Henderson retiree after 30 years in the Air Force, has never before sought election to anything.

Now he wants to be president.

You can mock him all you wish, but Dwight D. Eisenhower and Ulysses S. Grant each got elected president in his first try for public office — although, unlike Bowers, they enjoyed public profiles.

But Bowers, 59, exudes an unmistakable military bearing, a keen focus and the ability to take heat. During Desert Storm, Bowers sat in the back seat of an F-4g Wild Weasel, baiting Iraqi ground missiles to zero in on his aircraft so he could target them with his own missiles. He won each duel.

Bowers, a Republican constitutionalist, believes that if enough people friend him on Facebook, share his tweets and spread the word of his home page (kerrybowers.com), his candidacy might spread like some political wildfire. (That said, more than 400 people with all the benefits of the Internet officially ran for president in 2012, and only a tiny

EXHIBIT D

The following graphic, submitted as Exhibit 'D', is a copy of the Las Vegas Sun newspaper article published 5 March 2014 reflecting a general news story about the complainant's 2016 presidential campaign.

Goldsmith, 57, will enter the state prison system for a stretch of two host of charges following a 2008 brawl at a downtown wedding chapel

Even for Las Vegas, a city known for the unscripted, the event stood out: a fundraiser by one tough guy for another tough guy of a different stripe.

Citro had circulated an event flier using his own brand of streetwise humor: "Our pal, Pee-wee, and his son Brad will be leaving soon on a 'Government Sponsored Vacation.' With your help, they will be able to keep their lives in order at home." Any donations, he said, "will make sure Pee-wee and Brad know who their friends are."

Citro is a former boxer who's still sturdy as a fire hydrant. As emcee, he cruised the ballroom in a tuxedo, microphone in hand, extolling the guest of honor, whose nickname is a cartoonish misnomer.

Pee-wee (everyone calls Goldsmith that, so we will, too) stands 6 foot 8 and weighs 400 pounds. He wears size 16 shoes and his hands are ham hocks. His body is covered with tattoos of skulls and cherubs. A loner who has made a living off his mammoth body, he's a bouncer, brawler and bodyguard who calls people "bro."

Dressed in black, a gold necklace hanging from his neck, Pee-wee towered over a crowd of 150 people that mixed tough guys in fedoras, strong cologne and tailored suits with bikers in skullcaps, bandannas and wallet chains — one taking to the dance floor with a large knife handle sticking out of his back pocket. in a new UNLV stadium. It is also conducting between 20 and 30 telephone interviews with key community leaders, from regents to tourism officials, about the potential need.

In addition, CSL International plans to talk with several event promoters to see how many events could relocate to Las Vegas as a result of a new UNLV stadium.

The surveys are expected to be completed in a month.

During a two-hour presentation on Thursday, CSL International president Bill Rhoda went over various stadium models, from smaller collegiate stadiums, like the one at the University of North Texas, to major professional stadiums, like MetLife Stadium in New Jersey.

The proposed UNLV stadium must be a hybrid of the two types of stadiums, Snyder said. An on-campus stadium must accommodate football games but also cater to major events that could benefit the resort community and the Southern Nevada economy.

Cooking an election campaign from scratch

Henderson veteran: 'How can I expect change if I'm not the one picking up the flag?'

By TOM GORMAN

This story first appeared in the Feb. 23 issue of The Sunday.

This is how easy it is to launch a campaign for public office: Kerry Bowers, a Henderson retiree after 30 years in the Air Force, has never sought election to anything.

Now he wants to be elected president of the United States.

You can chortle and mock him all you wish, but it's not like a first-time office-seeker hasn't won the presidency before. Dwight D. Eisenhower's first elective office landed him in the White House, and nearly a century earlier, Ulysses S. Grant also got elected president in his first try for public office. For sure, they enjoyed public profiles; by comparison, a relatively minuscule number of people know Bowers.

But Bowers, 59, exudes an unmistakable military bearing, a keen focus and the ability to take heat. During Desert Storm, Bowers sat in the back seat of an F-4G Wild Weasel, ing, a keen focus and the ability to take heat. During Desert Storm, Bowers sat in the back seat of an F-4G Wild Weasel, balting Iraqi ground missiles to zero in on his aircraft so he could target them with his own missiles. He won each duel.

He retired in 2006 and, as he puts it, heard a calling to seek the office of commander in chief. He's a Republican constitutionalist.

Bowers has campaign tools that Eisenhower and Grant could never have conjured, and which will give him access to free messaging from coast to coast: Facebook, Twitter and an Internet home page (kerrybowers.com) filled with messages, letters and videos. If enough people share his Facebook profile and his tweets and spread the word of his home page, he thinks his candidacy might spread like some political wildfire. (Reality check: More than 400 people with all the benefits of the Internet officially ran for president in 2012, and only a tiny fraction got traction.)

"We're averaging more than 500 visits a day and it's growing," Bowers says. [See Campaign, Page 5]
